MISSOURI DEPARTMENT OF HIGHER EDUCATION AND WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

DEPARTMENT OF
HIGHER EDUCATION &
WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

Background

The Coordinating Board for Higher Education was authorized by an amendment to the Missouri Constitution in 1972 and established by statute in the Omnibus State Reorganization Act of 1974.

Board members – one from each of Missouri's eight congressional districts and one selected at large – serve six-year terms and are appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate.

The Missouri Department of Higher Education & Workforce Development, led by the Commissioner of Higher Education, serves as the administrative arm of the Coordinating Board.

On Aug. 28, 2019, the Missouri Department of Higher Education, the Division of Workforce Development, and the Missouri Economic Research and Information Center transformed to become one department. In 2021, the department underwent a strategic planning initiative to help establish goals and strategies to encompass both aspects of education and training and the public workforce system. The plan, Building Missouri's Future, will be used to drive work of the department for the next three to five years. In addition to goals related to workforce attainment and workforce participation, an internal goal to improve department culture and performance was also established.

SELECTIVITY:

Missouri's public colleges and universities follow a set of selectivity standards when considering students for admission. Institutional selectivity is standard admission criteria and includes such measures as a student's grade point average, high school class rank, and score on their ACT or SAT, or a combination of those scores. Some schools have open enrollment, meaning they do not take these standards into consideration when admitting students. Public community colleges must provide open enrollment. For more details about selectivity, visit dhewd.mo.gov/policies/admissions-selectivity.php.

Net price is the total cost of attendance minus the average amount of awarded federal, state or local government, or institutional grant and scholarship aid.

Total cost of attendance is the sum of published tuition and required fees (lower of in-district or in-state), books and supplies, weighted average room, board, and other expenses.

Net price is reported for first-time, full-time degree- or certificate-seeking undergraduates paying the in-state or in-district tuition rate who were awarded grant or scholarship aid.

Lincoln University and the University of Missouri are land grant institutions and make a required federal match to support this mission. Land grant funds are not available for student instruction, but past editions of the Fact Book included these funds in their appropriations and completions per FTE because the match was not appropriated separately from the core for both institutions. Land grant matches are excluded here from total core appropriations for Lincoln University and the University of Missouri.

DEPARTMENT OF HIGHER EDUCATION & WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

PUBLIC UNIVERSITIES

Missouri has 10 public universities, one of which is a system that includes four campuses. The institutions include five universities that got their start as regional teachers' colleges, two historically black institutions, and two universities that were initially community colleges.

COPHE, the Council on Public Higher Education in Missouri, is comprised of nine of Missouri's public universities, State Technical College of Missouri, and their presidents. The University of Missouri System is no longer a member of COPHE. COPHE is led by executive director Paul Wagner. The group elects a chair, who serves a two-year term. The current chair of COPHE is Dr. Roger Best from the University of Central Missouri. The current vice chair is Dr. Elizabeth Kennedy from Missouri Western State University.

Each public university receives an individual line item appropriation for its core operating budget. The University of Missouri's appropriation is traditionally combined for their four campuses and the allocations to each campus are made by the Board of Curators. Most of the schools employ contract lobbyists and/or have dedicated government relations staff.

Harris-Stowe State University

History

The institution known today as Harris-Stowe State University began as two separate teachers' colleges. One, the first public teachers college west of the Mississippi, was a normal school established by the St. Louis Public School System for white students. This school later became Harris Teachers College. The second, Stowe Teachers College, was founded in 1890 as a normal school for black students. The institutions merged in 1954 as part of the State Board of Education's efforts to integrate St. Louis' public schools. The new institution was called Harris Teachers College and was subject to the State Board's authority. The State Board eventually changed the name to Harris-Stowe College. A 1979 statutory change moved Harris-Stowe from being subject to the State Board of Education's authority to the relatively new Coordinating Board for Higher Education.

Harris-Stowe's degree offerings were limited to elementary and middle school educator preparation for the first hundred years of the school's history. In 1993, SB 153 authorized the college to expand its mission to include applied professional disciplines, including business administration (with options including accounting, management information systems, general business, and marketing) arts and sciences (with options including early childhood, elementary, middle, secondary and education studies). In 2015, SB 334 authorized Harris-Stowe to offer master's degrees. In 2021, the institution was designated with a statewide mission in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) for underrepresented and underresourced students.

Harris-Stowe State University is a Historically Black University (HBCU) with an 87% minority enrollment. As an open-enrollment institution, HSSU provides educational opportunities that are affordable, diverse, and accessible for first-generation and under resourced students who are not always eligible for admission at the state's more selective colleges and universities. As part of the institution's commitment to its mission, it provides rigorous academic programs that prepare graduates for challenging and rewarding careers upon successfully earning a college credential.

Lincoln University

History

The institution known today as Lincoln University was founded in 1866 by African-American Civil War veterans as a technical school modeled after Booker T. Washington's Tuskegee Institute. In 1890, Lincoln Institute became a land-grant institution. The school was renamed Lincoln University in 1921. In the fall of 1954, Lincoln University expanded its historical mission to serve a broader population of students with varied social, economic, educational, and cultural backgrounds. Today, Lincoln University is a historically black, comprehensive public institution that provides educational opportunities, including theoretical and applied learning experiences, to a diverse population.

Lincoln University is an open enrollment institution that offers eight undergraduate degrees in 50 programs of study. The university also offers non-credit and continuing education courses for students seeking personal and professional development.

University of Missouri-Kansas City

History

The University of Missouri-Kansas City's roots run back to the 1880s. Three professional schools that are now a part of the university were founded in the nineteenth century: the School of Dentistry, 1881; the School of Pharmacy, 1895; and the School of Law, 1895. When the Conservatory of Music was founded in 1906, community leaders began discussing the need for a university in Kansas City. The campus was established in 1930 with the first academic year beginning in 1933. In 1963, the University of Kansas City merged with the University of Missouri System, becoming the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

Metropolitan Community College

History

The institution known today as Metropolitan Community College began as Kansas City Polytechnic Institute, established by the Board of Education in 1915 as the first public institution of higher education in Kansas City. The school officially changed its name to the Junior College of Kansas City in 1919.

In 1964, seven suburban school districts joined with the Kansas City School District to create the Metropolitan Community College District. That year, the College Board of Trustees was also elected to govern the district. MCC's District now includes 15 Greater Kansas City area school districts.

As Kansas City expanded into the suburbs in the 1960s, so did MCC, opening the Longview, Maple Woods, and Penn Valley campuses in 1969. MCC-Blue River became the fourth campus in 1997. During the 2021-2022 academic year, MCC closed the Business & Technology campus (opened in 2002) and moved the programs housed there to three new buildings at Blue River and Penn Valley.
